Pere Fuset
Councillor of Festive Culture
City Council of València

For yet another year – and there have been quite a few – València will be celebrating its Grand Fira in the month of July. This is a fiesta dating from 1871 that aims to refresh the life of Valencians and visitors with lots of joy and entertainment. It's a huge party that in recent years has re-emerged from modernity to bring back traditions and amalgamate them in an urban summer festival with a multifaceted lineup that a large Mediterranean city such as València deserves.

Music, magic, theatre, games, fireworks, sports, flowers, traditions, street parties, dances, competitions, Fallas monument shortlistings... A complete programme designed to attract all kinds of audiences, with offers for all tastes, all ages, all neighbourhoods and all pocketbooks. A plural lineup for a diverse city, with its squares and streets, that all want to enjoy the cool nights of summer, bringing in hundreds of artists from home and away who are ready to put on their finest shows for all comers.

The Grand Fira will again be the umbrella for an intense cultural and festive agenda promoted by the City Council of València, but also by many other public and private institutions, which join hands every new year with more strength and initiatives to give greater value to the city and its charms during the summer months.

From the time the giants Quiqueta and Nelet arrive to happily light the opening firecracker cords, all the way through to the final Battle of Flowers on the Alameda Boulevard, there are countless activities on the agenda, in line with the successful programmes of past years, grouped into theme nights with lots of variety, all reminding us that culture is not only a right, but also a joy forever, and it's always the best option.

You are holding in your hands a guide to all the options, so try to take in as many as possible, although, as you may see, perhaps you won't be able to get to all the hundreds of proposals awaiting you.

In any case, let's celebrate summer, because this year the Grand Fira is bigger than ever!

What to eat in summer? Go for seasonal food

Eating what the land or the sea offer us in each season is not only healthier, but also more economical and sustainable.

In summer our body needs less calories and more water. The high temperatures mean we have to hydrate ourselves more than usual. Fruits and vegetables in this season are characterised by their high water and fibre content, thus allowing us to get all the necessary nutrients without suffering from heavy digestions.

As for fruits, watermelon and melon stand out as the true kings of summer. Watermelon contains the most water, and is rich in antioxidants, vitamins and minerals. Melons only provide 26 kcal per 100 grams. They are rich in vitamins A and E, and they help to neutralise acidity. Adding watermelon to the typical gazpacho vegetable soup, making watermelon and melon ice cream, or adding them chopped up in salads, are other ways to get them into your diet.

Peaches are also typical of summer. They are rich in antioxidants and fibre, and low in calories. It's also time for plums, apricots and nectarines, as well as the last few cherries of the season.

The tomato is the king of summer. Although we can enjoy tomatoes throughout the year, it's in summer when they are at their finest. Making gazpachos and salmorejos, or eating them raw in salads, are ideal ways to enjoy a light dinner. Other typically summer vegetables are cucumbers and peppers, which are also used in recipes for gazpacho.

And the sea?

In València, from May to September, we can enjoy Valencian clòtxinas, a smaller type of mussel with a finer and tastier meat than their Galician and Catalan versions. These months are also ideal for eating shrimp (gambas), prawns (langostinos), Dublin Bay lobsters (cigalas)... and of course, fresh sardines, grilled or marinated for topping toast or in salads. Delicious and rich in omega-3.
